In the city of Tallinn, Estonia, the Priisle park was inaugurated as a modern, multifunctional space designed to promote community life and outdoor well-being. This urban park features a wide range of facilities that make it attractive for all ages. Among its elements are the Gavarres benches, accompanied by their stools, offering a comfortable resting place for families and groups of friends. They are located next to the playground and skatepark, encouraging social interaction in a natural and welcoming environment.
Priisle has become a key meeting point in the neighborhood, reflecting Tallinn's commitment to creating sustainable, inclusive, and functional public spaces, where design and comfort come together to improve citizens' quality of life.
