Need / Problem: The children's space required new play elements that offered different activities and promoted physical development and interaction among children.
Solution: Installation of play equipment from the ROY collection by Benito, made of robinia wood, with climbing, balance, and modular play structures.
Result: A more dynamic, attractive children's space is created, integrated into the natural environment, which encourages active play and family interaction.
In L'Esquirol (Barcelona), a municipality in the Osona region surrounded by natural landscapes, a children's playground has been renovated with new play equipment from Benito's ROY collection, characterized by the use of robinia wood and its natural aesthetic.
The area incorporates the TAP seesaw, the ROY 22 climbing set, the ROY 117 modular play structure, and the ROY 64 element, offering different possibilities for movement, exploration, and fun.
Robinia wood stands out for its strength and durability outdoors, as well as providing organic shapes that promote the integration of play equipment into the landscape.
The ROY collection is committed to a playful experience that goes beyond entertainment, fostering creativity, the development of motor skills, and contact with natural materials.
The result is a welcoming and stimulating play space where young children can explore, learn, and enjoy nature.
