In Guadassuar (Valencia), the renovation of the final section of Gran Vía has transformed this space into a more welcoming, natural promenade focused on citizen well-being.
The intervention incorporates Minsk benches and chairs in olive green, together with matching Minsk litter bins, creating a unified image consistent with the surroundings. The chosen colour palette reinforces landscape integration and provides a serene, contemporary visual identity.
The new design is complemented by strategic planting and tree installation which, especially during the summer months, will generate climate shelters and shaded areas. Thus, the space not only improves aesthetically but also responds to criteria of thermal comfort, sustainability, and climate adaptation.
A project that consolidates the end of Gran Vía as a more comfortable meeting point, with thoughtful design and prepared for everyday use throughout the year.

The olive green MINSK chairs are not only aesthetically appealing but also made from high-quality materials to ensure durability and strength. These chairs are a bench made with ductile function feet, treated with Ferrus, an iron protective process that ensures optimal resistance to corrosion. This treatment is essential to keep the furniture in optimal conditions, especially in an environment like a hospital where hygiene and durability are prioritized.
In this way, the Barcelona Hospital not only embraces innovative and welcoming design but also prioritizes functionality and quality in every detail. The combination of careful design and high-resistance materials ensures that these chairs are not only visually appealing but also practical and durable for daily use in the hospital.
